Liz Michasiw, Chief Education Officer

A PMI and PMI-CTT member since 2007 and a PMI-CTT volunteer since 2011, Liz is currently Director, Professional Development and Chief Education Officer, responsible for developing and implementing both near-term and long-term plans for education and certification programs for Chapter members. It is a role well aligned with Liz's belief that project management should be incorporated into everyone's learning, as it is invaluable in so many aspects of our lives.

A certified PMP since 2008, Liz is currently at Rogers as part of their IT PMO and has extensive experience in project management for the Communications sector. What does Liz love most about project management? "Every project is unique and comes with its own challenges and opportunities."

Project Story

Liz shared her project management and education expertise and education on a recent trip to Yellowknife, Northwest Territories, where her son now lives and works. Sharing attributes of project management with him was welcome guidance to help keep his projects moving along. When not sharing advice, Liz had the opportunity to see a part of the country she had not yet visited and reflect on the fact that we often do not realize all the beauty that is in our own backyard. She is looking forward to returning for another visit in June, when she can experience the day with the most hours of sunlight and make more memories with her family.
